people moving their laundry from the dryer or wash and then they get lost	Having the machine secured through carolina card.	Based on sensors instead of the timers	App tracking when laundry is done (that actually works)	Focus on upgrading existing technology, rather than replacing dryers and washers.
People leaving their laundry unattended	Locking machine to app user	Detecting when door is open	Integration to the apple reminders app and the equivalent of that app on other OS	The App could have a self report forum in which people say when they put their laundry in.
People not knowing when their laundry is done	passcode or lock to open	More system time checks	PopUp Notifications on Phone	Sync account with Carolina Username and Password
Lacking time management from those who put their laundry in when they are busy.	Fingerprint Scanner?	Laser Recognition to tell is something is in there: The laser is blocked, then something is there, but if the laser shines through, then nothing is.	Developing sensors inside of the machines to detect when clothing is removed	Temporarily ban accounts from dryers if clothes are left in for too long repeatedly.
